Five Ways to Fail
Mr. Mellon Knows
Calvin Coolidge—50 Shares
A Billion Candle Light
By Arthur Brisbane

IN AN advertisement Mr. W. L. George, British writer, mentions five things that interfere with success. They are SHYNESS, IMPATIENCE, WORKING TOO HARD, which destroys originality, FORGETFULNESS and TALKING TOO MUCH.

ALL THOSE things can be conquered, Louis XI was shy, but one of the greatest kings France ever had.

Napoleon was outrageously impatient; he kicked the great philosopher, Volney, in the stomach, when he couldn't answer his arguments.

Buffon, who worked too hard, was one of the greatest naturalists. Tycho-Brahe worked too hard, so did Copernicus, Kepler, Galileo, Descartes, Newton, and almost everybody else that ever amounted to much.

AS FOR forgetfulness, it doesn't matter if you remember IMPORTANT things. And talking too much is a matter of temperament. Disraeli talked too much, but made himself prime minister of Great Britain, and boomed Victoria Empress of India, and boomed many Britons who said very little, because they thought very little.

TWO MISFORTUNES do really interfere with success. One is conceit, which keeps you from trying; the other is lack of brains, that causes failure even if you try.

SECRETARY MELON understands business, and money, having gathered together four or five hundred million dollars—perhaps more.

The people are fortunate in having him to look after their money and they will uphold him in protecting the Federal Reserve from attacks which he believes are to be made upon it.

By the Federal Reserve this country was saved from the blackest kind of panic after the war, and a panic, almost as black in the beginning of the war, when frightened speculators closed the Stock Exchange and prepared for doom.

Thanks to the Federal Reserve Bank that, instead of the doom they feared, they had a boom.

THE LIST of stockholders in the big steel company shows that President Coolidge owns 50 shares, worth a little less than $6,000 at present prices. That ought to put Steel up a little and have more effect than the buying of 50,000 shares by some professional speculator.

THE PRESIDENT has contributed this to the language of the poultry dealer: "Asked whether you should say, 'A hen sits or sets,' he replied: 'That isn't important. But when a hen cackles, it is important to know whether she is laying or lying.'"

That will interest your small boy. It applies to politicians, editors, etc., as well as to hens.

WHEN THE FRENCH do anything it's done thoroughly. This applies especially to their determined effort to keep control of the air above us.

To facilitate night flying, France establishes on a high spot near Dijon the first great air lighthouse.

THIS GIANTIC light of one billion candle power, covering a radius of 800 kilometers, will light French flares from Paris to Alaska. A few such lights would make night flying possible around the world.

Fifty years hence, high power telescopes on another planet, may reveal our powerful night lights for flares. The Martians will say: "That backward little 'earth' is waking up."

FOUR MORE railroads will be made into one system, if there is no government objection—and there probably won't be. The Union Pacific, M. K. & T., L. R. & N., and Kansas City Southern will be under one control.

The bigger the better. Combination means economy, and Continued on Page 3, Column 7.

Woonsocket, R. I., April 21.—Breaking down a heavy rear door of the Dunn Worsted Mills early today, six armed bandits gagged, bound and blindfolded a fireman and two watchmen, appropriated an auto and drove off with $15,000 worth of finished cloth.

A question of jurisdiction halted the trial of Simon Swig and Henry P. Lehan in the Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge today.

In addition, Mr. Lehan is charged with being criminally negligent in putting $20,000 of city money in Swig's bank just before it failed.

45 ESCAPE FIRE IN PEABODY SCHOOL

Thirty-seven boys and girls and eight Xaverian brothers fled the St. Joseph Juniorate of the Xaverian Brothers School in Andover street, Peabody, today when fire swept the structure to destruction.

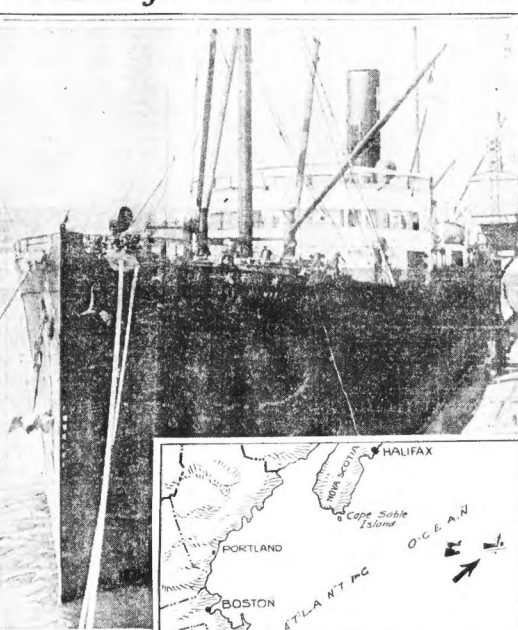

The three-story wooden building, one of the finest in Peabody, was part of the old John Rogers estate and was one of Peabody's landmarks. So rapidly did the flames spread that aid was summoned from Salem, Lynn, Danvers and Beverly, the assisting firemen laying more than 200 feet of hose and endeavoring to get the low pressure water up the high hill.

WHERE JAP SHIP WENT DOWN

Steamship Portland Maru, sister ship of the Japanese steamship Raifuku Maru, which went down today 400 miles off Boston. The lost craft was of the same size and design as the vessel shown in photo. The ship sank after a long battle with a gale-swept sea. The crew was lost. Map shows where the disaster occurred. Rescue ships were called to the scene by frantic radio appeals from the sinking liner, but arrived too late.

JAPANESE SHIP GOES DOWN 400 MILES OFF BOSTON DURING GALE

The Japanese freighter Raifuku Maru, with her entire crew of forty-eight officers and men, was lost about 400 miles off Boston today, according to wireless dispatches from the White Star liner Homeric.

The message was sent after the Homeric had made a 70-mile dash at top speed in a vain attempt to rescue the crew of the disabled vessel, whose cargo had shifted in yesterday's storm.

Following receipt of an early morning S. O. S., which, in turn, was followed by frantic appeals for immediate assistance, the Homeric headed for the freighter, jumping her speed to twenty knots.

The White Star liner attempted to maintain constant communication with the Japanese vessel, but kept the courage of the crew.

At 10:30 the Homeric was within about thirty miles and it was "hazy" if she would arrive in time.

News of the sinking of the Raifuku Maru and the loss of her crew was received by the White Star line office in New York by wireless from the Homeric.

The Japanese steamship last night for about six months. Although badly battered by the sea, the Homeric, the first S. O. S., which was received a minute after the ship was sinking, sent calls for help.

From that time on, a succession of appeals for immediate assistance were broadcast by the sinking vessel, with responses at once from the steamers President Adams, Styria and Homeric.

All three, after obtaining the complete bearings of the Japanese craft, were brought to the scene of the disaster.

The King Alexander of the N. A. and Greek Steam Navigation Company, reported itself as being ten miles from the Raifuku Maru, and the Ocean Star also declared herself in the vicinity.

The authorities at Halifax immediately despatched the steaming tug her compass bearings, and then the call of the Maru dashed through the ether once more.

JAP STEAMER SINKS; CREW IS LOST

"Ship meeting heavy weather," it stated, "and held starboard twenty-eight degrees. Smashed lifeboat into boats and in danger."

Five minutes later, the Maru's operator, who had been in his position since the start of the storm, said: "In great danger---quick hurry."

At this point the steamship operator in telling the Maru's operator to get compass bearings from Cape Race, giving her own position as 43° north, 65° west.

TALK TO LIFEBOATS.

With the air full of speeding messages, and the officers and crew of the Maru apparently convinced that their craft was about to sink beneath them, the Homeric entered the circle with the latest announcement that she was on the way to aid.

"No wind danger but coming: lifeboat from sixty miles there."

The message was broken by the Homeric getting her compass bearings, but evidently meant the crew had taken to lifeboats. This was confirmed by the Homeric about 10.30, although it was believed the Japanese craft's boats were useless.

At eight o'clock the Homeric reported she was within seventy miles of the disabled freighter, and would reach her within four hours.

At nine o'clock the captain of the Maru asked for "quick assistance" and the Homeric reported she would reach her speed to twenty knots and would be on hand in two hours.

At ten o'clock the Independent Wireless Company reported the wireless of the Maru was in operation, but a short time later came the message from the Homeric that the crew had taken to boats.

SAILED FROM BOSTON.

The Raifuku Maru, Captain K. I. Ito, sailed from Boston at 10.30 with a cargo of 7,800 tons of wheat taken on board at the House of Representatives. The craft was heavily laden, and encountered heavy seas when she put out on her course to Hamburg.

The vessel carried a crew of 45 men, with 10 passengers, and a sister ship of the Portland Maru, which arrived at the Army Base yesterday.

According to Suzuki & Company, Inc., of New York, the Raifuku Maru is owned by the Kokoan Kien Kaishu Kaisha of Kobe, owners of the vessels, the Raifuku Maru's crew and of the steamer of Sunday or Monday morning.

Despite efforts to locate the Maru it is believed the heavy bulk which got the better of them and listed the vessel so that she was unable to make any headway.

With great sea raking her decks, it was but a question of time when the water would penetrate to the hold, and the vessel would sink to the extent that the hatches would be blown off and the craft founder.

The Maru is of 5,800 tons gross and was built in 1915 at Kobe, Japan. She is 283 feet long, 31 feet beam and 24 feet deep, and is one of a fleet of fifty-eight steamships operated by the Kokoan Company.

She left Philadelphia on April 3, stopping at Boston to take on a cargo of wheat, and cleared for Hamburg.

The Homeric was bound from Southampton to New York when she picked up the R. O. S. and headed for the disabled freighter. The Homeric is equipped with directional wireless and the Japanese ship was instructed to keep her radio in operation to assist the British craft in reaching the scene.

SHIP BOARD MINORITY EXPLAINS TO PRESIDENT

Washington, April 21.—Minority members of the shipping board filed statements in the Pacific Mail corporation suit against the suit of the Pacific Mail corporation.

The President inquired as to the action of the minority who opposed the suit to any one of the terms of the suit, and their answers were virtually the same as their statements filed in court.

It was emphasized that Mr. Coolidge was concerned with the administration of the board's affairs and the suit which resulted in the minority members going into court while a suit was pending against the government.

Commissioners Thompson, Plummer and Benson dissented from the suit.

ATLANTIC CITY POLICE CHIEF'S NEW CAR STOLEN

Atlantic City, N. J., April 21.—Thirteen miles the brand new silver 1924 Chief of Police Buick Naylor of Pleasantville. The car was parked in front of City Hall by Chief Naylor, while he attended to a case in court. When he came out his machine was missing. At first he believed it was a joke but when it could not be located, he sent descriptions of it to neighboring towns by telephone accompanied by a reward of $100 to "help the thieves in jail."

Ringling Circus to Show June 8-13 in Charlestown

Cheer up, children, the circus is coming.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's Circus will show this year at the Charlestown Playground, Sullivan square, the week of June 8 to 13.

This was the only location the circus authorities considered in Boston limits, and after the park department had voted its approval Mayor Curley signed the permit today.

The circus will pay $600 for the ground and at the end of the week place the grounds in the same condition they were before occupancy by the big show.

NOTARY GUILTY OF PERJURY SENTENCED

Louis B. Green, a Milford notary public, in Dedham Superior Court today sentenced to three months in the House of Correction by Judge Lummus, after having been found guilty of perjury.

Green offered for probate one will of the late Elias Wood of Foxboro, claiming they were made two days before the testator's death. Evidence was produced showing the second will was made on the day of Wood's funeral.

Judge Lummus also sentenced Sheriff Harold B. Shepard and Charles T. Brennan, both of Lynn, and placed James A. Marks on probation, after the three had been convicted of stealing an automobile in Franklin. Marks is serving a six month sentence for the same crime in local reformatory in his possession.

BROOME CASE SENT TO "IMPARIAL COURT"

Kington, R. I., April 21.—Agreeing that it would be impossible for him to get an impartial trial in this town, Judge Edward Blodgett, of the Washington County Superior Court, today granted a change of venue to Richard Broome, charged with the slaying of $30,000 of the Kingston Trust Company.

Broome, who was arrested three months ago, he will be tried in Providence.

Miss Mary Terrell, in prison for her part in the bank failure, is alleged to have taken the money from the accounts of depositors and given it to Broome, who is said to have induced her to invest in worthless bonds.

WASHINGTON CALM OVER SITUATION IN HONDURAS

Washington, April 21.—The American government appears to be in accord with confidence the situation of American property and lives in Honduras, where President Calles' officers and men were landed at Tela by the cruiser Denver.

The request for the landing force made by Consul Warner was a precautionary measure to prevent recurrence of the revolutionary disorders of a year ago, when an American citizen was killed and several foreigners who had taken refuge in the compound were wounded seriously.

ONE MUST TURN TO THE RIGHT IN ITALY

Milan, Italy, April 21.—Driving to the right now is compulsory in all Italy. Formerly the rule was to turn to the left in the cities and to the right in the country. With the increase in motor traffic this rule was found to be of great importance.

There is turning to the right now in England, Germany, Austria, Portugal, Sweden, and Hungary. Madrid follows the left turning, but all the rest of Spain turns to the right.

New Haven, April 21—Only twenty years have managed to make up the span of Olympia Maerz, girl, sister and unwed mother, but into the short 18½ decades have been crowded sorrows that do not come to most women in a lifetime.

Tornado Victim Walks Back to Maine Home

Corinna, Me., April 21.—Walter Davis, thirty-nine years old, a veteran of the World War, is back in his native town here, after seventeen years in the West, having walked or been given "lifts" by motorists all the way from Bryanston, Ind., where the tornado wiped out his home, killed his wife and two children, and wrecked his business, leaving him nothing but about 7c, when his affairs were closed up.

Davis was doing a good business in selling gravel, having the only pit in the vicinity, and his industry saved his life, as he was working late in the pit.

HUB CATHOLICS URGED TO FIGHT RUM EVIL

Total Abstinence Union Told Business Men Secretly Approve Bootlegging

An intensive drive to enlist the younger generation in the fight against rum running and the illicit manufacture and sale of intoxicants was urged by speakers at the forty-ninth convention of the Archdiocese of Boston Catholic Total Abstinence Union in St. Ann's School Hall, Somerville.

That business men cannot be depended upon to wage a war against liquor drinking and the illicit manufacture and sale of intoxicants was charged by speakers. Rather, they prefer to secretly "pat the boot" on the back and wink at his evasion of the law," it was stated.

More than 100 delegates, many from distant points, attended the conference. The session was opened with a mass celebrated by the Rev. Francis A. Butler, rector of the St. Ann's Church. The Rev. Francis X. Nolan, rector of the St. Gregory's Church, Milton, presided at the annual dinner. Addresses were made by the Rev. Maurice J. O'Connor, R. D. Channing, general, and by the Rev. William McCarthy, St. Mary's Church, Brookline.

Thomas C. Burke of New York delivered a challenge to Catholics in his report on recent investigation of the boot way to spread the doctrine of total abstinence. He charged Catholics with ill-will and urged more abstinence societies in Catholic parishes.

Brilliant and Novel Effects to Mark Copley-Plaza Costume Ball Friday

Betty Alden

ALL IS GOING MERRILY as the proverbial marriage bell in preparation for Friday's Costume Ball at the Copley-Plaza. There's a whisper going about that clever hands that the Fashionable World have been put together and all manner of eeling effects evolved in the way of fancy dress.

It may be that Society—remember, the brilliant spectacle of the Fine Arts Carnival which was held but so very long ago—is determined to top even the marvelous display of rich and authentic costumes. At any rate, Friday evening promises a lavish display.

Array for Friday's Costume Ball will be to 1 hour—followed by a musical performance. The kaleidoscopic scenes of French ball romances when the frolicsomeness of the revel will be the scene of the morning.

THE BOX holders' hot grooves in South and importance with such notable day. Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Pickman, Mr. and Mrs. Tolbert C. Chase, the Phillips R. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. T. Tucker Burr, Jr., H. T. Polson, Mrs. Oliver Starnes, Channing Wells and James Parker have reservations.

OTHERS PLANNING to entertain parties in one or another of the best homes to be arranged around the business are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuckerman, the Robert W. Edmunds, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sibley Webster and Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Harding.

MISS RACHEL SMITH, one of the eeryphes of the Vincent Club, which has just concluded its Spring presentation of "Fec" at the Boston Opera House. Miss Smith danced in several parts, as a Moroccan girl and as a parlor maid.

14 service for enlisted men wearing Uncle Sam's uniform.

CERTAINLY THERE'll be no dearth of the youthful element in the Boston Opera House next Saturday afternoon to applaud the charmingly fanciful fairy opera of Humpstead, "Hansel and Gretel."

THE YOUNG PEOPLE now students of the New England Conservatory of Music, as well as past pupils of that institution, are putting on the opera under the direction of Wallace Goodrich.

PRACTICALLY EVERY musician in town will be represented in the box parties at the Copley-Plaza. Mr. and Mrs. E. Scher Welch have taken the box they have during Grand Opera week, just in the very center of the horseshoe curve.

THE WELCHES have a young daughter who follows the family's artistic musical trend, and will listen to "Hansel and Gretel" on Saturday. Nearly will be Mrs. Albert T. Fuller, with the Governor and the small Fuller children.

MRS. FULLER will find the afternoon especially delightful, for two associates of her Viola Davenport Boston Opera Company days—Bernice Fisher and Jessa Swartz—are taking parts of "Gretel" and "Hansel" just as they did in the olden days.

THE ONE-TIME Bernice Fisher is now Mrs. Morgan Butler, and making almost no professional appearances. Jessa Swartz is now Mrs. Morse, and both have young households who will attend the performance.

MR. AND MRS. DANIEL DE MENOCAL have reservations for themselves and their small girls. Mrs. John Astory Lowell (Stake, Mrs. J. Tucker Burr, the Marchesa de Perant and Mrs. Louis Colledge are also down for seats.

OTHERS OF Boston's large musically inclined public who will be there are Mrs. James Jackson, Jr. and her boys and girls, Mrs. John Bryant Paine of Weston, mother of an interesting family of six young children, which does such splendid things.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Mrs. Harry Gould
"Four years at various intervals my liver would become torpid, and I frequently suffered from gas in my stomach. I always resorted to a physician at such times, with no little expense. After trying out results of other medicines I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and for a few mornings Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and I had the best of results. After I saw what it was doing for me, I advised my husband to try it and this past spring is the first in five years that he did not have to be under a doctor's care for stomach trouble and a run-down condition. Dr. Pierce's Discovery is truly wonderful. It is harmless, yet so beneficial. It is with the greatest pride I send the statement of Dr. Pierce's true honesty in giving to the public, within the reach of all, medicine far-reaching enough to heal disease. I feel that I cannot make impressive enough the value of this medicine."

Gould Heiress Tells the Intimate Details of Life of Rich

By EDITH GOULD WAINWRIGHT.
Daughter of George J. Gould and Granddaughter of Jay Gould.
CHAPTER XXVI

ABOUT the middle of each May, when the weather at Lakewood grew warmer, our parents would send us children to the Catskill Mountains prior to their departure for Europe two months later.

Papa's private railroad car would be sent to Lakewood and we would board it with the nurses and governesses. Papa and Mamma usually made the trip to the mountains by automobile.

As we left the train in the evening, we would feel the fresh mountain air on our faces and we hopped into the automobiles at the station with fine enthusiasm. Our house, a picturesque log cabin, was situated fifteen miles away on a mountain top. It was from this part of New York State that my grandfather, Jay, originally came, and naturally Papa had a great affection for it.

He owned nine miles of trout stream as well as a large lake which he kept stocked with trout. Papa and Mamma, and in fact the whole family, were fond of angling for trout. Early in the morning we would start out with our fishing rods, baskets, landing nets and fly hooks and motor down to the stream.

The initiation fees are fashioned of feathers and silk and these used for trout are like salmon flies save that they are smaller. In the water they closely resemble the kind of insects on which the fishes feed. There are several types of such bait, for instance, "cuckman," "gray hackle" and "queen of the waters."

It is considered very unimportant to fish for trout with a worm or grasshopper. No real trout fisherman would stoop to doing that because bait hooks do not give the fish a real chance for its life. Real dry fly angling is a complicated but fascinating game.

LOAD OF LIQUOR PICKED UP OFF PALM BEACH

What is the story behind the apparent abandonment at sea of a high-powered motor boat and a cargo of liquor valued at about $4,500?

"That is the question over which the officers of the United Fruit Company's steamship San Bruno, just from Port Linton, Costa Rica, are puzzling. The San Bruno, on April 1, while about 40 miles northeast of Palm Beach, picked up the motor boat which was laden with 500 bottles of whiskey, champagne and beer.

The motor boat, which was the "Vito," was started while the San Bruno was on her outward passage from Havana.

The San Bruno brought a cargo of 40,000 bunches of bananas, 200 cases of the same fruit, 425 cases of pineapples, 500 sacks of coconuts and 300 bags of raw sugar. After her return to Havana, she will take on fruit at Port Linton for Avonmouth, England. Another ship will have her share on the tropical run until she returns.

Among her passengers for Boston were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Krohn, of Boston, who spent four months with their family in "GARDEN" and Mrs. E. Marshall, of Lowell.

DR. GUTHRIE WILL KEEP UP FIGHT

Says Bishop Manning Has Made Him "Goat" Because He Is Progressive

New York, April 21 (Universal).—"I shall fight on. Bishop Manning has not won and cannot win."

While he was placing a golden dove of peace to hover over the altar of St. John the Divine, if I could only speak three or four words to a conclusion the warfare between himself and his Episcopal superior.

When Bishop William Manning Brown, of Arkansas, twice convicted heretic, failed to speak, Sunday, from the pulpit of St. Mark's after Bishop Manning had said he would bring Dr. Guthrie to trial if he did so, the matter did not end.

WRITES TO HISHOP

Bishop Brown, at a conference of newspaper men, said: "I am going on writing letters to dear Bishop Manning. I am so anxious to preach in the cathedral at St. John the Divine. If I could only speak three or four words to a conclusion the warfare between himself and his Episcopal superior."

MADE THE "GOAT"

Justice Davis drew attention to Bishop Brown's book, "Christianism and Communism," and quoted extracts therefrom.

Dr. Guthrie had this to say: "Bishop Manning has tried to promote himself in the public eye by a book which is a masterpiece of misrepresentation and misquoting. He has made me the 'goat' of the Protestant Episcopal Church."

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

As you turn the different dials, do you ever look into your radio?

We really have much in common.

I learned a salutary lesson from the radio the other evening. I was working in one part of my home and was anxious to get a particular attractive musical program. But my efforts were meeting with no success. I got the leading station all right, but the music was very poor. Either it came too loud or too soft. Some of my switching brought something other, something more to me, but I was not at all up to what had been promised. I gave up and went to bed.

Shortly after I had resumed my work a door opened and from a radio in another part of the house came a clear and sweet and beautiful sound. It was the music I had wanted. It was good.

We human beings are very much like the radio. If we constantly encounter discord, we are not getting the best out of our lives. If we experience annoyances, if everything seems to go wrong and nothing seems to go right, we are not getting the best out of our lives. It is not the fault of the radio, but of the person who is not using it properly. It is not the fault of the radio, but of the person who is not using it properly. It is not the fault of the radio, but of the person who is not using it properly.

Take, first, individuals. Some of us are out of tune with our work. Some of us are out of tune with our family. Some of us are out of tune with our friends. Some of us are out of tune with our community. Some of us are out of tune with our country. Some of us are out of tune with our world.

We know that many corporations are badly out of tune. They are out of tune with their customers. They are out of tune with their employees. They are out of tune with their community. They are out of tune with their country. They are out of tune with their world.

Individuals and corporations can get out of tune from a variety of causes. They can get out of tune from a lack of interest. They can get out of tune from a lack of effort. They can get out of tune from a lack of skill. They can get out of tune from a lack of knowledge. They can get out of tune from a lack of experience.

Do not some of us get out of tune because we allow our heads to be bowed? Do not some of us get out of tune because we allow our hearts to be heavy? Do not some of us get out of tune because we allow our minds to be confused? Do not some of us get out of tune because we allow our spirits to be depressed?

Let us turn our heads up. Let us turn our hearts light. Let us turn our minds clear. Let us turn our spirits bright. Let us turn our dials to the right station. Let us turn our dials to the right station. Let us turn our dials to the right station.

Spirit of '75 Still Strong in New England

In the hearts of the Minute Men of 1925 the spirit that animated the Minute Men of 150 years ago still survives.

If yesterday's celebration of Patriots' Day proved nothing else, it proved that.

The very real and very practical patriotism of the thousands who journeyed through the cold and snow to Lexington and Concord gave earnest that loyalty to the ideals of the pioneers of American freedom is neither dead nor sleeping in this historic Commonwealth.

It is true they went forth to pay tribute to the original Minute Men, not to engage in battle with the forces of the Crown. But other times, other problems, and other methods of showing love of country. In this age, as in that, there is need of intelligent patriotism and men to meet the need.

In connection with the Minute Men of Concord and Lexington, it is well for us not to forget that they, like the Minute Men of today, believed in preparedness.

They were not an unorganized mob. They were not collected at random and hurled forth to fight the army of the King. They had prepared as well as they were able to resist oppression and when the hour of fate had struck, they were READY. They were, in brief, the Minute Men.

Those Minute Men of Old trod the same soil, breathed the same air, fought under the same Spring sky which canopies us, a free and independent and forward-looking people.

They show us not only the worth of freedom, and the value of loyalty unafraid, but the need of preparedness in this time, as in their own.

Minute Men of 1925, remember what they demonstrated—"Eternal Vigilance is the price of Liberty." It cannot be bought with other coin.

Where Competition Beats Monopoly

Study Automobiles and Telephones

Competition ought to be always WASTEFUL. It must be. And a monopoly ought to give better service for, you would say, less money, as the postoffice does.

But apparently what OUGHT to be doesn't always HAPPEN. For instance, compare the telephone service and the telephone company with automobile manufacturing and the automobile companies.

You say offhand, "Of course there must be many more telephones in the United States than there are automobiles." But you would be mistaken.

Duncan Curry, the automobile expert, points out that "at the end of 1923 there were 15,221,183 automobiles registered and only 15,000,101 telephones."

In 1920 there were 2,000,000 more telephones than automobiles in the United States. That lead was overcome in three years.

In 1923 the telephone monopoly added about 300,000 telephones to the nation's supply as against 4,000,000 automobiles built and distributed.

This country could easily use 30,000,000 telephones, but the big telephone monopoly cannot supply them to keep up with the demand.

If you try to get a new telephone put in, you know what that means—long, uncertain waiting. You can get a new automobile in a minute by walking around the corner and signing your name on the dotted line.

The telephone monopoly might learn something from Henry Ford. In 1911 he built 34,979 cars. In 1912 he built 76,000 cars, in 1913 181,851 cars, last year 2,400,000 cars. Now he is building 7,000 cars a day. He did this by CUTTING PRICES as low as possible.

Other automobile makers of all ranks have struggled constantly to reduce the price. As a result, this country has more automobiles than it has of the little cheap machine that you hold in your hand called a telephone instrument.

Monopoly is all right when the government controls it and works for the PUBLIC and for CHEAPER RATES—as when it sends a letter from Miami to Seattle for two cents. But outside of public ownership competition is still needed.

Monopoly makes too direct and successful an appeal to human cupidity.

An American Artist

John Sargent, who died in London the other day, is among those who make us realize the greatness of America. More than that, the citizens of Boston can take especial pride in the fact that it was here that he belonged and here that are many of his greatest works.

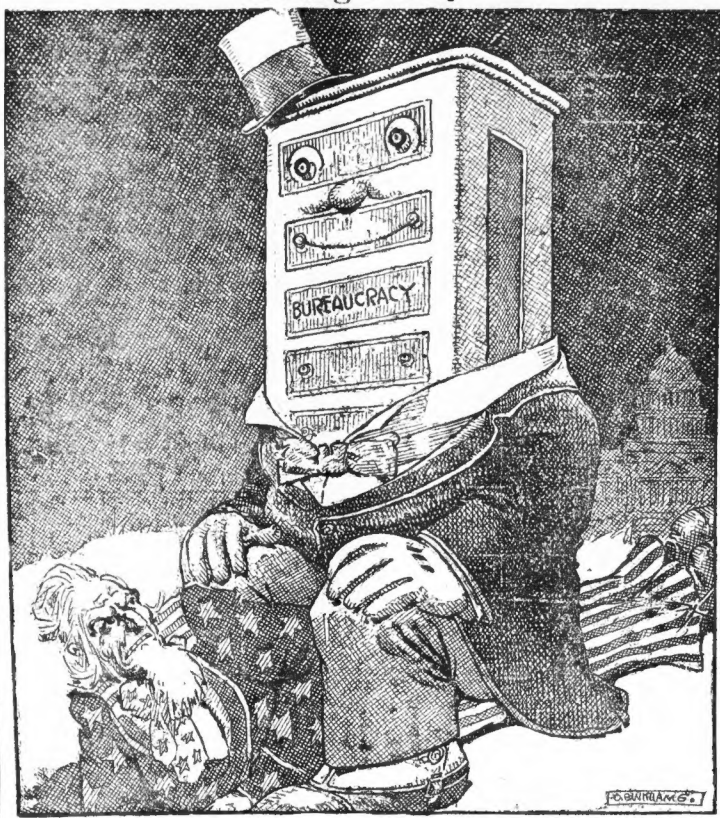

John Sargent and his work give the lie to those who say that America's only greatness is industrial and who deny our country excellence in the arts. The vigor, the color, the life in his work are the direct result of American inspiration and American blood.

Like Whistler, Sargent spent much of his life in Europe. But his main work is in and of America. His mural paintings in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Boston Public Library and the paintings in the Gardner Museum in the Fenway are proofs of that. Countless portraits and sketches throughout the country show it even more clearly.

As art lovers, the New England people and all Americans can mourn his passing. But all can thank him for what he has added to America's greatness.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

Sitting Pretty

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS

By Helen Rouland

WHEN, oh, my Daughter, doth a woman reach the Age of Discretion?

Behold, a woman hath reached the Age of Discretion—when she can say in her heart, "Now, at last, I am a philosopher. Now, at last, I can look at myself—and laugh."

Yet, alas, who can laugh at her own folly, while she doth the foolish thing? Even, while she weareth the frankish hat, kisseth the waving man, felleth in love with the hound, and jay-cawleth upon the primrose path.

But, when the head hath ceased to be dizzy with love or vanity, when the rose-water hath gone out of the sky and the glimmer hath faded, then cometh philosophy as a drink of cold water upon the morning after a party.

Go to, my Daughter. When thou seest Jack back and such to behind thyself old in July in August and in wide stockings in January—When they cease to smile to reveal thyself in a tight corset and a trailing skirt, shouting "Vivats for woman!"

When thou canst laugh at the glowing illusion with which they didst clothe a commonplace man, even as a statue of Pan in a silk top-hat and a linen collar—When thou canst remember thy dreams of "Perfect Companionship" and say, "I wish—"

When thou canst recall with mirth the time when thou didst BELIEVE in Platonic friendship and seek to practice it with ONE man—between the first meet and the first kiss—

When thou canst regard a pair of lovers in the spring, without envy and gaze at a Summer moon with out sighing for ANY man, or at a woman the most fascinating of men—

When thou wouldst not exchange a good novel for the privilege of hearing any man talk about himself—

When thou requirest no man's flattery to keep thy vanity alive, no man's promise to hold thee in the forest, and no man's admiration to preserve thy illusion—

When thy heart is not troubled over, not FOR, nor BY any man—When no man can thrill thee or hurt thee, fool thee or inspire thee, flatter thee or surprise thee—

Then, oh my Daughter, art thou indeed a PHILOSOPHER! Then, thou hast reached the Age of Discretion, which is the safe-soundness of woman!

But, alas, until she reach her reason's office, WHAT woman ever attains the safe-and-sane Age?—HEAL!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Barrow remembered Aristotle's precept: "Joy."

Nature has appointed the twilight as a bridge to pass us out of night into day.

Moderation is the silk string running through the pearl of all virtues.

With the heart of man to assure and transport, he wants to enjoy nothing but himself.

Truth needs no flowers of speech. Vengeance lies on a freewheel.

No practicing power is wanting if prudence be not employed.

It is difficult to persuade men that the love of virtue is the love of themselves.

Some her adversary, but slinks out of the race, where that immortal Gaiety is to be run for, with our dust and heat. —Milton.

Try to be happy in this very present moment, and put off being so to a time to come.

He whose pride oppresses the humble mind, perhaps he is humbled, but will never be humble.

The covetous man never has money. And the prodigal will have none shortly. —Ben Jonson.

There is this paradox in prudence: It makes some men ridiculous, but prevents others from becoming so.

Nothing can lead into error as hard as that promises hastily and uncautiously made.

Human nature is so constituted, that all sin, and slide better to the affairs of other men, than to their own.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST
By Aline Michaels

W HIGGINS once youth's golden twilight played through tresses that and fast, now time with kindly hand has laid his finger on your hair. Upon your brow, once so serene, so shadowless and pure, and in your placid, listless mind the traces of youth are there. Your form is bent, your step is slow, and something in your eyes holds hint of twilight's afterglow across the sunset skies. But friend of Old men be to me yourself I know today, for you are laughing and "I'm in beauty's proud army. For now I read the tale of life that was told in the days of youth, the strife, the inner strife, the battle bravely won. Old friend of mine, the swift years roll and bear youth's charms away but like a war-worn sword your soul grows brighter day by day!

THE SPECTRAL CLUE TO STAR DISTANCES

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

HOW do they ascertain the distance of stars too far away to show a measurable parallax, based on comparison with the diameter of the earth's orbit? asks a reader.

There are several approximate ways, the best, perhaps, being that of W. S. Adams, called the "spectroscopic method."

It has been discovered that there are certain lines in the light of stars whose apparent velocity is regular with the absolute luminosity of the stars themselves.

These lines, called "H and K" lines, are of the same luminosity, or brightness, these same two sets of lines present exactly opposite appearance.

It is in fact, the same lines, but in the one case they are bright, while in the other case they are dark, and the difference in the amount of light is the clue to the distance.

This peculiarity, which it is thought may be due to special conditions of ionization in the stellar atmospheres, serves as a mark of distinction between stars of high luminosity, without regard to their apparent brightness, which varies with their distance.

It is thus possible to "determine a definite numerical relationship between the intrinsic brightness of a star and the relative strength of these lines."

When we speak of luminosity we refer to the absolute brightness of a star as it would appear seen from a distance of 32.6 light-years, or the distance of the nearest star.

The standard distance that has been chosen is ten parsecs, i. e., ten times the distance corresponding to a parallax of one second of arc.

When a star is, mathematically, brought up to that distance its apparent brightness becomes its absolute brightness (luminosity) or its absolute magnitude.

If the sun were pushed away ten parsecs it would sink to about the fifth magnitude. On the other hand there are stars in far-off distances, and a few scattered ones, which if brought up to the standard distance would outshine the sun five or ten thousand times.

At its actual distance the magnitude of the sun is 26.5. A star ten thousand times brighter than the sun put in place of the sun would appear to us of magnitude 14.5, every increase of five magnitudes involving an increase of a hundred-fold in the brightness.

Now suppose that a faint telescope star is observed to have the lines that we have mentioned so related as to indicate that the star must possess an absolute luminosity ten thousand times greater than the sun's.

Yet it is found to stand upon the earth only a hundred-thousand-millionth as much light as we get from the sun. This difference, between its absolute brightness as related by its spectroscopic condition, and its apparent brightness to our eyes, can only be caused by its great distance.

Remember that the intensity of light varies inversely as the square of the distance. If the star's distance appeared to shine with the same brightness as the sun, then its distance, in terms of the sun's distance from the earth, would be equal to the square of 10,000, i. e., 100,000,000 miles.

But since its apparent brightness is only one 100,000,000,000 of the sun's, its distance must be the square root of 10,000 divided by one 100,000,000,000,000, i. e., the square root of 1,000,000,000,000,000 times the sun's distance from the earth.

This square root is about 21,500,000, which multiplied by 32,600,000 gives us a certain absolute magnitude of the distance of the giant star.

To illustrate the principle of spectroscopic identification of stellar magnitude, suppose balloons painted in patterns corresponding to size were scattered, through a city, some far away, others near.

A certain pattern would correspond to a certain absolute magnitude of the balloon. Then the real size being known from the pattern the apparent size would give a clue to the distance.
